

Silence Speaks Volumes

Mike Eliason, Santa Barbara News-Press 2/13/2007

Students were voluntarily “caged” at Laguna Blanca School in Hope Ranch to call attention to inhumane incarceration around the world. Friendship Tours World Travel CEO Alethea Tyner Paradis’ created “The Cage” project as part of a course unit where students researched, among other topics, the War on Terror, revisions to rules of habeas corpus established under the Geneva Conventions and prison crowding in California.

MIKE ELIASON / NEWS-PRESS PHOTOS

SILENCE SPEAKS VOLUMES

Mark Romasanta, above left, and Kayla Horibe were “caged” Monday at Laguna Blanca School in Hope Ranch to call attention to inhumane incarceration around the world. As part of “The Cage” project in Alethea Tyner Paradis’ history class, students researched, among other topics, the war on terror, revisions to establish rules of habeas corpus under the Geneva Conventions and prison crowding in California. Among the students who stopped by the cage, right, were Audrey McPherson, left, Cindy Gama and Dab Brill.

